Friday 11th October

Dear Families,
 What a week it has been at our lovely school this week; I certainly have been a very proud Headteacher. The Macmillan Bake Sale total was an amazing £274.11! #wonderfulcommunity. I would like to thank you for your generosity for such a wonderful cause. Let's go bigger and better next Year!
 I was very impressed with the Harvest Festival this year. Such a beautiful service led by Father Craig. The children presented some fantastic offerings and they behaved wonderfully. It melted my heart to see such a gathering of friends and family in our lovely church.
 We have worked alongside an Ofsted Inspector this week, Mr. Simon Sloane who has assisted with our school development planning. He loved our school and recognises how far we have come since September. We will be focusing on our curriculum and reading throughout this year – such essential ingredients to success.
 It is also election time at Royston St Johns! In true democratic style, we will be hosting elections in the upcoming weeks. The School Council will again act as ambassadors for all things RSJB. We will be launching this with an assembly this week. Thank you to Miss Best for her leadership in this area.
 Have a lovely weekend as always. Keep an eye on our Twitter feeds for the latest RSJB news.

Lee Spencer
 (Executive Headteacher)
